Church Characteristics Desired:

I would like to serve in a church that has an eagerness for living the good news of our Lord Jesus Christ; a church that desires to be relevant and to transform its community through Christ's redemptive love; a church that shares a vision for empowering and strengthening families through a deepening of their relationship with Christ; a church grounded in faith and Scripture, that seeks to not only believe in Christ, but more importantly, live according to Christ. I feel called to work with an energetic and vibrant staff where we inspire and encourage the congregation to live faithful, wholesome, healthy, and compassionate lives nourished by the Word of God and nurtured by healthy examples.

God has equipped me with gifts in teaching, family ministry, education development, administration, community outreach, congregational care, evangelism coordination, and long term planning. I have found these gifts to be effective in building programs with sound foundations. However, it is within relationship that God continually calls me: relationship with God, other Christians, and non-Christians. I am seeking a church that shares my commitment to God's model for relationship.

Accomplishments in present call:

As a pastor, my greatest accomplishments have been found working with the people that I have been called to minister. Whether it has been praying with someone during a debilitating illness, officiating a former youth's wedding, or writing a sermon, I feel privileged to be a pastor.

Since 2007, I have been serving as a chaplain with an emphasis upon ministering to families and individuals dealing w/ mental health issues. In Fall 2009, I joined the staff of FPC Bellevue as a part of their congregational care outreach. In that time, I have worked in the following areas: - Implementing mental health chaplaincy on Seattle Eastside - Emergency visitation and homebound ministries - Contemplative and anointing prayer - Worship preparation and administration - Crisis counseling - Bible studies - Small group workshops - Community resource teams - Support groups and classes - Preaching

Leadership Style:

My most effective leadership qualities are visioning, relationship building, listening, communication, open-mindedness, introspection, honesty, prayer, example, a good eye for leadership in others, and a profound sense of my faith.

I do not lead by an autocratic style. Rather, I lead through direction, faith, vision and relationship. Using Jesus' example with his disciples, I work with the youth leaders, teachers, elders, and committee members who are sent forth to carry the gospel into their groups, classrooms, and committees. At the same time, just as Jesus did with the community at large, I am committed to staying connected to the congregation and community by proclamation of the Word, listening and assisting their spiritual needs, and setting an example of healthy and holy living.

While conflict is not always pleasant, it can be an important part of change within a church. Over the past few years, I have come to recognize God's use of conflict to bring about transformation both within the church and for personal development.

Key Theological Issues:

Due to our own sinfulness, we live in a world filled with brokenness. While this problem is not new, what is new is the scope of the problem. Of particular concern is the erosion of primary support bases once turned to during times of personal trouble: the church, family, and, most of all, our faith.

In our society's relational vacuum, a deep hunger has resulted, a hunger for something more. Humanity finds itself searching for deeper and more meaningful relationships that can provide the support, love, direction and encouragement. Many mistakenly turn to fleeting idols such as work, money, or casual relationships, only to find they are disappointed and still yearning for more. We hunger to fill a deep chasm within our soul, a chasm that can only be bridged by God.

In our union with Christ, God has commissioned and empowered the Church in healing the world from its broken heart. The Church participates in God's miraculous plan to fill the world with the love and grace offered by the Father through Jesus Christ and experience wholeness in the fellowship of the Holy Spirit. As Christians, we participate in three ways: 1) letting our light shine among others through holy living that is in tune with God's will; 2) fostering and encouraging others in their journey with Christ; and 3) inviting others to share in the good news that we have experienced. The Church exists to guide these actions through worship, prayer, and action; pointing not to our own efforts, but to God.
